Satirical read

WORLD OF PARTIES AND EXCESS

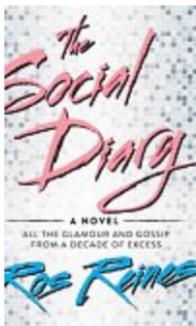

WHEN Savannah Stephens returns to her hometown Sydney after a stint as a music journalist in London, she is thrown into the burgeoning world of society parties and the excesses of the eighties social scene.

Savannah's first job back on home soil is as the editor of the newly created Social Diary. Her days are spent battling old fashioned newspaper colleagues, who frown upon the so-called 'women's pages' and tut when her stories make front page splashes.

Funny and satirical, The Social Diary reads at times like an extended version of Ros Reines' real-life gossip column feature Guess Who Don't Sue.

Dark deeds at work

UNLOCKING MYSTERIES

ANNA Verco is an academic. A book thief. And a savant. Entangled in a murder investigation in Barcelona, she uncovers a centuries-old mystery that seems to relate to her...

Barcelona, Summer 2003

Three women are sacrificed to an unknown purpose, skin carved with a cryptic alphabet, tongues cut from their mouths. Sent puzzling letters, Inspector Fabregat cannot decipher the warning within.

As Barcelona explodes in revelry on the Festival of St Joan, Natalia Hernandez, flower of the National Theatre and Catalan idol, lies dead on the steps of the Cathedral.

The city bays for blood, Fabregat chases riddles and shadows; signs that whisper of an enigma beyond his understanding.

Barcelona, Winter 2014

Anna Verco – academic, book thief, savant – unearths letters hidden for centuries from a lightning struck chapel on Mallorca.

What they reveal drives her back to Barcelona to reignite the Hernandez investigation.

Every page she turns conceals a secret message; every street she treads leads her deeper into the labyrinth.

As Fabregat baits her with suspects, and threats darken her steps, Anna hunts her own prey – the book that began it all, a medieval revelation written in the language of witches and writing women: the Serpent Papers. Anna believes this book will unlock the mystery.

She does not yet know she is the key. Copies of The Serpent Papers (RRP $29.99) courtesy of Hachette Australia.
